GENERAL MARKET REVIEW. MONEY MATTERS

lowing conclusions: On this view of the shall have an easier and more tranquil year than has been usual with us for many ess bouyant than some persons have conjectured, will at least be free from those spasms with which the money market has disturbed it. Thirdly, speculative excitement will be less rife at the Stock Exchange and elsewhere. And, finally, a more con-servative caution will control the banking and financial operations of the country, both as to railroad building and other works which convert floating funds into fixed capital. There are, also, analogous changes which are said to be establishing themselves among our mercantile men in regard to keeping their capital in their legitimate business instead of taking out part of it for perilous risks and speculative ventures as some of them have been tempted to do during the demoralizing era of paper money

THE HOP PROSPECT. The following, relating to the hop products, is from Mr. Joseph Tebb's encular: From authentic information received during the past week there is reason to believe that the unfavorable accounts recently reported in respect to the growing crop of English hops is not at all exaggerated, and that with the most suitable weather for ripening and gathering the yield must be week of from I to the on low grades, and of majority of gardens in Sussex the crop will scarcely be worth picking. In the upper, middle and lower parts of Yalding, to use an expressive phrase of a writer, the crop is "done for." In Hunton, Nettlestead, Wateringbury, East Peckham, Mereworth, Feston and West Farleigh the prospects are better. One large garden at the top of Yalding looks very promising. In Canterbury and neighvery promising. In Canterbury and neighbornoed the hops are coming nicely into burr, and, for the season, are very promising. Hamp-bire and Surrey are favored this year, while in Worcestershire and Hertforoshire the yield will be small. The speculative de-

SPECULATIONS ABOUT BREADSTUFFS. The New York Bulletin gives its views as follows: Taken as a whole, the European harvest is not likely to turn out quite so weil as the early promise indicated. Those who have followed our almost daily accounts translated from continental journals will have noted that recently, in many instances, the reports have assumed a less tavorable character. Some districts have suffered from excessive heat and drouth, and others from too much rain, France, however, having apparently been more exempt from these excesses than other counties. The Mark Lane Express of Aug. 18 gives the following? account of the weather during the middle week of August. Allay pains, subdue swellings, Bad weather has prevailed throughout the heal burns, and will cure rheu- past week, but our farmers have kept a matism, spavin, and any fiest, sharp lookout and have secured their crops. Low grades bene or muscle atlment. The There are no reports of sproucing, though much wheat was stacked in poor condition the Yellow Wrapper for animals in consequence of high winds and low temperature. The same weather has ruled on the continent. The crops here and in France are mostly secure, and the dependence of both countries on foreigners is materially lessened. The latest estimates put our crop at seven per centum below the average.
With the information at present to hand, it does not seem safe to conclude that the result of the European harvest will be more than a full average as to quantity and about the same as to quality. In the case of England, the authority above quoted estimates a deficiency of 7 per cent.; but the After an extended argument on the situa- estimates for the Austrian empire, published tion, the Financial Chronicle reaches the folfacts ene or two things seem tolerably certain with regard to the future. First, we home the promise is somewhat better than abroad. In both wheat and corn there is an increase of acreage, and the weather has been money market throughout the rest of the favorable to a high average condition; we have therefore every reason to expect more BUTTER-Prime. years past. Next, the course of business, if than an ordinary surplus for export. This probability is also strengthened by the fact that, as the hay and potato crops are very promising, there will be less inducement to substitute corn and oats for cattle and corn and potatoes in our family consumption. In Europe, however, there is very generally a deficiency in the crops of feeding stuffs, hay, clover, and roots; which will cause a heavier drain upon such grains as can be used as substitutes.

How do these facts bear upon the future or prices of breadstuffs? We can not coincide with those who predict a severe decline in wheat and corn as the result of the gener ally good harvest. It is never found that abundant harvests cause any great decline in prices, except in the event of the new supply coming upon already good stocks in hand. And that is not the present condition of the grain 1 $100,000 ter 90 days at 7 per United States together, are very light. As the Mark Lane Express recently remarked "the barns and granaries of every country were never swept cleaner;" and before any important decline in prices can be effected be burtbensome, and, as a rule, not until then. When stocks have been lightened by ceipts at this point, but it was manifest at the possible event of abundant harvests in 1875 as the occasion of any material drop in prices, rather than expect that result from throughout the entire line lower than last the group pour being gathered season, and some brands or makes are now lower than last the group pour being gathered. the crops now being gathered. We have also to consider the question of probable consumption. While bread is the most essential of all articles of human consumption, yet it is not exempt from liability are for the most part considered desirable, with to curtailment of use by the condition of the prices a shade under last season.

WHOLESALE MARKETS. MONDAY EVENING, August 21. Since the report last week the turn has taken place in wheat and the price may be considered as the best it will be for some time to come. It is not a bad thing to know that bread will be abundant and cheap. Corn is not materially changed in price. The exhaustion of provisions able seasons. The above prices will go into and high price of hogs is an additional element effect on and after the 25th of August. Mr. Ezekiel, the Cincinnati senlptor who has been commissioned by the Israelites of America to design a statue to be unveiled at the centennial exercises at Pailadelphia in 1876, has completed his model. It has for its central figure a Goddess of Liberty, of heroic size. By her side is an ideal figure of a boy holding aloft the eternal fire and typifying the universal belief in a higher power. On the other side is an American eagle dropping the killed serpent "Intolerance" over the edge of the precipies. The group will be executed in Rome out of one solid marble block, and will be double life size. The base will be 12 feet in hight, and will be subscribed with the date "1876," with the clause from the constitution providing for religious liberty, and perhaps the sentence, "From the Israelites of the United States to the General Government. It will first be unveiled in Fairmount Park during the centennial celebration, and afterward removed to Washington, where it will be permanently placed.

The late George Peabody bequeathed a fund of $150,000 in trust for the erection of a "moseum of natural history, especially of zoology, geology and mineralogy, in connecnection with Yale College." The edifice will cover an era of 414 by 145 feet, and will be, in many r spects, one of the finest in New Haven. It is to consist of a main building and two wings, fire-proof throughout. The basement will be taken up in part by working rooms and in part by an exhibition room for the collection of Connecticut Valley tossil footprints. The first story will be appropriated to a lecture room and mineralopy; the second to geology; the third to zhology, and the fourth to arenwology and ethnology.

A very curious case, but one well authenticated, of sudden physical affliction and as sudden recovery, is reported from Pittsburg. Pa. Nearly seven months ago a young lady named Agnes Holtzman, living with ber parents in that city, was suddenly afflicted with dumbness. The physicians could give no expicit cause for the affliction, and all the remedies tailed to effect a cure. She was to-
